

Early Marriage Paragraph for SSC (Class 10)

Early marriage means getting married before the age of 18. This happens to many girls in poorer countries around the world. Even though most countries set 18 as the legal age for marriage, many girls are still forced to marry at a young age.

There are a few reasons why early marriage happens. Sometimes families want to marry their daughters young because they think it will protect her or make the family more secure. Other times it is for cultural or religious traditions. Also, when families are very poor, they may choose marriage instead of paying for their daughter to attend school.

Getting married so early is very hard for girls. It stops their education and they have to take on big responsibilities like running a household and having children before they are physically and emotionally mature. This causes health problems and means they cannot make good futures for themselves.

To stop early marriage, people need education about why it isn't good, and families need other options to feel secure about their daughter's future. Leaders must also make sure existing laws against early marriage are followed. With more opportunities like school, jobs for young women, and changes in long-held beliefs, we can end this practice so girls can enjoy their childhoods and maximize their potential.
