

Paragraph on Early Marriage in 250 Words

Child marriage, the wedding of those under 18 years old, has spanned cultures and regions for centuries. Drivers include tradition, poverty, lack of education, and beliefs it protects young girls. But the reality exposes serious harms. It denies children, especially girls, education, limiting future opportunities. It also risks health from early pregnancies, endangering both young moms and babies. Additionally, it eliminates freedoms - play, personal growth, and life choices.

Child marriage hampers society. Kids deserve full childhoods. They need opportunities to learn, grow and gain skills to become productive community members down the road. Hence many nations and organizations actively combat the practice by financially assisting families, promoting schooling, and instituting laws against marrying minors.

With this support, we can progress towards a future where every child enjoys safety, development, and youth without undergoing premature marital responsibilities. Robbed of childhoods, compelled into situations they are not ready to handle, no young person should have to bear the weight of early marriage. Concerted help so all youth can ultimately marry as consenting adults is needed to make this a reality.
